FROM WALL STREET

Quiet Opening in Stocks Attended by Irregular Price Movement.

NEW YORK, Sept. 9.—Little change from recent irregular conditions was shown by movement of prices at the quiet opening of today's stock market. Although signs of further ease of money induced moderate short covering, American international was the strongest feature, rising almost one point and some of the steel, copper and rubber were fractionally higher, but otherwise the market was quiet. The new French loan to be offered to day brought no relief to foreign exchange. British remittances again receded.

Trading slackened at midday when selling for profits caused a decline in the price of the market. The market was quiet, with some short covering, but otherwise the market was quiet. The new French loan to be offered to day brought no relief to foreign exchange. British remittances again receded.

Range of prices on New York stock exchange, with previous closing bid, furnished by Shepard & Gluck, Fall building.
